'Light but Tight' oversight and regulatory system to ensure integrity and transparency of the higher education system in India is the core of the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020. As per this policy, there would be one common regulator, the National Higher Education Regulatory Authority (NHERA) for all HEIs in India. Currently it is difficult to establish equivalence/difference of various management degrees offered in India due to multiple and overlapping regulators such as between Post-Graduate Diploma in Management (PGDM) and Master in Business Administration (MBA), between Fellowship Programmes in Management (FPM) and Doctoral Programmes in Management (PhD). NHERA through various verticals catering to different disciplines should be able to streamline and simplify degrees and diplomas. Additionally, the single and simple regulatory system would provide autonomy to B-Schools that is essential to innovations in education and pursuit of academic excellence.
