We got to know the difficulties from the students [during Covid-19 phase] like power cut, poor network, long exposure to computer screen etc. Pre-recorded lectures and recording of live lectures will help those who faced interruptions during the lectures. Breaks during the lectures will also help students to avoid continuous exposure to computer screen for a long time. We realized that online sessions take longer time compared to face-to-face sessions to cover the given content...Management education is more about discussions, group activities, learning from peers. Therefore, [we have] no plans of having any part of the classes in online mode when the situation normalizes.

New Positions and new industries are coming up...One is the sector in which new industrial jobs are coming up, where our students are getting their job and the second one is domain. Today, because of globalisation, there are new areas like fintech, that is financial technology, EdTech, e-commerce etc. Even the management students, after passing out, are getting jobs on online gaming media. Students are also getting jobs on portfolio management, product and programme management. Also, one particular domain that has come in a big way is analytics, particularly when you deal with a large volume of data. Management professionals are also required in this sector.
